Why X Patch

Ultimate Protection

UPF50+, UVB 99.9%, UVA94.9%

Ultraviolet B (UVB)
A shorter wavelength (280-315nm). Associated with sunburns, hyperpigmentation, melasma, freckles.

Ultraviolet A (UVA)
A longer wavelength (315-400nm). Associated with premature aging, oxidative stress and skin cancer risks.

The diagram illustrates the skin's layers: Epidermis, Dermis, and Hypodermis. Two red arrows labeled 'UVA' and 'UVB' point downwards from the top. The 'X-Patch' is shown on the surface, blocking the UVB rays. The UVA rays are shown penetrating through the epidermis into the dermis and hypodermis.

Make sure you're protected from the sun.

Hypoallergenic & Safe

HOW TO APPLY & REMOVE Watch Video

1

Thoroughly make your skin clean and dry. Gently tear off the patch from the backup film while maintaining the outer protective film.

2

After attaching the patch to the desired area, press firmly and spread it evenly with your fingers to avoid any curled areas.

3

Remove the outer protective film from the central incision in both lateral directions.

R

When removing, hold the edge of the patch and remove it. It will be detached without any tearing and residues.

T

If you attach the patch after washing and drying, the adhesion becomes stronger. If the edges of the patch curl while wearing, apply cream or serum and gently spread it with your fingers to make it fit again.
